X. Numb. 52. 145

THE OBSERVATOR.

from a Gentleman about the Inconsistency of the Principles of the High-Church Faction, the Representation of the House of Commons. Their Self-Contradictions, in applauding Sacheverel's Sermon, the Oxford-Decree, and the Representation at the same time. The 's Principles of Unlimited Prerogative, and Unconditional Obedience, condemn'd by the sentation.

From Wednesday, June 27. to Saturday, June 30. 1711.

HERE's a Letter from an honest Gentleman, who takes notice of several gross Inconsistencies the Faction is guilty of, s your Opinion of 'em.

an Illiterate Country-Man, am often led with Matters that seem very incon- but yet by Men of your Parts and can be easily reconcil'd. 'Tis chiefly s account that I make bold to trouble this Letter, and desire you will be (if you can) to reconcile with the late ation of the House of Commons, the s of those who call themselves the Ge- n of the Church, and particularly great Professions of Loyalty, and utter ions of all Republican and Antimonar- nciples, mention'd in their Addresses Majesty last Summer; wherein several declar'd they were for Loyalty without and Obedience without Reserve, and that ty was accountable to none but God own Conscience: Whereas in this Re- on, the Commons assert it to be their ndoubted Right to grant Mony, and to Proportions of it; and say, that to in- Charge of the War beyond the an- lies granted by Parliament, is an ille- ice, and comes very little short of ony without Consent of Parliament; o make use of what is granted for one he Service for any other, is a Misappli- the Publick Mony. If any one had arty when they presented their Ad- hat before a Year came about some of y call'd High-Churchmen, and those ers, would use such Language as this een, I believe he had gone in danger his Head broke. And now when old of this, they reflect upon those n as Hypocrites and Apostates, who g'd their Principles, and are become Whigs. I cannot likewise forbear that all the Adorers of Sacheverel and e should be so much in love with this ation of the Commons; which, in my as contrary to his Maxims, as Light ness: and I think if a Man was to years to rail upon it, he could not do bitter Language than I find in the s they call it) which he preach'd at That I am not mistaken, will plainly this short Account of part of it.

ctor in his Dedication says, Are not shionable Methods now made use of, break in upon the Prerogatives of the 'Crown, to threaten them with imaginary Le-

'gions, and a Popular Tribunal, where their 'Authority is to be try'd and determin'd? But
'to put a stop to this dangerous and encroaching
'Mischief, he thought it his Duty, in order to 'preserve us from these malicious Designs, to en-
'deavour to set us right in our Notions of Go'vernment, that we might not be flatter'd into
'our Ruin; and that seeing the fatal Consequen'ces of these damable false Doctrines, which
'some seditious Impostors had labour'd to poison
'us with, we might forsake and detest 'em. And
'in his Sermon he tells us, The Grand Security
'of our Government, and the very Pillar upon
'which it stands, is founded upon the steddy Be'lief of the Subjects Obligation to an Absolute
'and Unconditional Obedience to the Supreme
'Power. But this fundamental Doctrine (says
'he) notwithstanding its divine Sanction, and
'without which it is impossible any Government
'shou'd subsist with Safety, and which has been
'so long the honourable and distinguishing Cha-
'racteristick of our Church, is now it seems
'quite exploded and ridicul'd out of countenance,
'as an unfashionable and dangerous Tenet, utter'ly inconsistent with the Rights, Liberty and
'Property of the People; who, as our new Po-
'liticians teach us, have the Power invested in
'them to call their Sovereign to account, for-
'sooth! and what is almost incredible, presume
'to make their Court to their Prince, by main'taining such Antimonarchical Schemes. And
'thus, adds he, do they endeavour to justify the 'horrid Actions and Principles of 1641. which 'have been of late years so publickly defended,
'to the scandal of our Church and Nation, not 'only by Republican Writers, but by some that 'have the Confidence to stile themselves Sons of 'the Church of England. And a little further he 'says, he wou'd fain know where the difference
'lies, betwixt the Power granted (but from what
'Commission God knows) to the People to judg
'their Sovereigns, and a no less usurp'd Power of
'the Pope to absolve the People from their Alle-
'giance: And says, God forbid that any such
'Power should be lodg'd in any other than God
'himself, the King of Kings, Lord of Lords, and
'only Ruler of Princes. So that these Notions
'will carry us into something worse than Popery
'it self, if 'tis possible, and more fatal to the 'Rights and Interests of the Crown, which can
'never be safe under such precarious Dependen-
'cies. A Prince indeed, in another sense, will 'be the Breath of his Subjects Nostrils, to be blown
'in or out at their pleasure, and a worse Vassal
'than the meanest of his Guards. Such villanous
'and seditious Principles as these (says he) de-
'mand a Confutation from that Government they so

'info-

'671

'is solemnly threaten, and which are only proper to 'be answer'd with that Sword, they wou'd make 'our Princes bear in vain.

'You know when this flaming Divine was call'd 'to an Account for this sort of Doctrine, he justify'd himself in it, and said he taught it as he 'had learnt it from the Homilies, and as he was 'enjoin'd to teach it by the Articles of our Religion: To confirm which he quoted the Writings of several venerable Prelates both dead 'and living, as also the famous Oxford Decree; 'wherein, among other Propositions, they condemn this Proposition as false, seditious and impious, viz. The Sovereignty of England is in 'the three Estates, viz. King, Lords and Commons; the King has but a co-ordinate Part, '(viz. as to the Legislature) and may be overrul'd by the other two. This they decree, judg 'and declare, to be false, seditious and impious, '&c. Now that the same Persons should be Admirers of the Doctor's Sermon and Oxford Decree, and of the Representation at the same 'time, is what I cannot reconcile; and I think 'those words of Elijah may be properly apply'd 'to them, How long will you halt between two Opi- 'nions? So that if none of them will undertake 'to reconcile these Contradictions, I am resolv'd 'to petition Dr. Sacheverel, that the first Subject 'he preaches upon may be the 4th of St. James, 'and the latter part of the 8th Verse, Cleanse 'your Hands you Sinners, and purify your Hearts 'you Double-minded. I shall conclude, Sir, wish-'ing you would publish something of this nature, 'and make it shorter or alter it, as you think con-'venient; and in so doing you will very much 'oblige several of your Well-wishers.'

Now pray, Master, give me your Opinion of this Letter.

Obs. The Gentleman, whoever he be, Roger, writes like a plain-hearted sensible Briton. I am very glad to find one, who disowns all Claim to Learning, capable of chastising the High-Church Rabbi's, and of making their Inconsistences so evident.

I took notice before, that the Sacheverelite Faction is mightily disappointed in their Expectations of this Parliament; for instead of asserting his and the Examiner's Doctrine, they have taught the quite contrary, and like true Britons vindicate the Right of the Commons to have the sole Disposal of the publick Purse. This is far from Sacheverel's absolute and unconditional Obedience to the Supreme Power, or the Stile of those Addressers, who set up for Loyalty without Bounds, and Obedience without Reserve; for instead of believing the Doctor's Propositions, or being terrify'd with his Threats against those who act contrary to his slavish Doctrine of Passive Obedience, they claim their Right of censuring and bringing before the Tribunal of the People of Great Britain, such Ministers as are guilty of Mismanagement, and of misapplying Parliamentary Supplies, without so much as putting in a Salvo for those who should act so by the Sovereign's Order.

It appears likewise by the Place-Bill, and that for revoking the Grants of former Princes, that the present House of Commons is as far from allowing an Unlimited Prerogative as any of the preceding Parliaments, whom the Examiner so foolishly libels; and that they take as much liberty as any of their Predecessors to censure what they think Frauds and Depredations in evil Ministers, and Attacks upon the Constitution of liament, &c. They likewise advise her M with as much boldness as ever any House of mons did, to avoid, as the greatest Enem her Royal Dignity, and to her Peoples Saf such as shall endeavour to engage her Maj such pernicious Measures as they compl This makes it evident beyond all Contrad Roger, that the Whiggish Principles are ap and those of Sacheverel and the Examine demn'd by the present House of Commons.

Country m. I pity the Folly of our Hig Master, who are not capable of seeing the Inconsistences, but condemn themselves eve by their own Words and Proceedings. Souls! they know not what they do, b umph in those things which ruin all the ar Schemes of Government that they woul upon us to believe, on pain of Da There never was a greater Proof of the ness and Badness of a Cause, than our Tor now had of their own; for tho the E boasts they are nine Parts in ten of the and chose a Parliament according to their Desire, yet their Principles are condemn very Members they chose, from a plain tion that they are inconsistent with the of the People of Great Britain, whose and those of her Majesty, the Commons clar'd to be inseparable; whereas the S lites would allow us no other Interest th disposs'd of as the Prince should think fit, fer our selves to be led like Oxen to m ter, and at the same time to be as dumb before the Shearers, without opening our But, Blessed be God, our Representa taug't them better things, and have neit off the Padlock from the Mouth of their ter of Sedition, nor would suffer one to their own; but have bravely reasserted ples Right to complain of Grievances, Ministers to an Account, and to advise vereign in the weightiest Affairs of th stration. Magna est Veritas & prævalebi
